CONSUMERS' LEAGUE

REVIEWS HOLLOWAY REPORT. ing Department Store Girls.

The Consumers' league of Connecticut, through its secretary, Miss Mary C. Welles, has issued a pamphlet as a revitw in part of the report of Chariotic M. Holloway, special investigator, to the general assembly of 1915, and in it are contained many facts and side lights on the work of department store girls whroughout the state. The investigation covered 163 stores and of the 5,125 girls employed in them as many as 4,503 were interviewed and questioned. About 32 per cent of the girls worked in 5 and 10 cent stores were under age, and 39 per cent of the other department store girls were minors.

While the majority of the department stores obey the law which says women shall not work more than after-eight hours a week, and not later than 10 o'clock there are times before Christmas and Easter when a few proprietors slip. Some Bridgeport and New Haven stores are described as having a law unto themselves, being run by foreigners who evidently pay little attention to regulations. One wife, who was working in a store overtime, told the evidently pay in the war workulations. One wife, who was working in a store overtime, told the

In fairness to the stores in general, it is added, this conversation seemed to be an exceptional one.

Girls are attracted to department stores as a sort of paradise, for the setting is decidedly feminine, and the work is described as being a pleasure since they are able by it to "meet socially at their daily tasks marriageable young men with clean hands and good clothes who have at any rate the outward aspect of genany rate the outward aspect of gen-tlemen.
